Dr. Tonya Huber, Wichita State University

Participants in this workshop will explore interdisciplinary multicultural education through multiple modality and cultural content approaches. Participants will experience first-hand the implications of multiple modalities and cultural styles for student success in learning activities. Learner outcomes include (1) a working definition of multicultural education and (2) conceptualization of the knowledge base to maximize teaching strategies for diverse learners through multiple intelligence and cultural styles curriculum development. The content of the presentation is from the presenter's books Teaching in the Diverse Classroom: Student-Centered Activities That Work (1993) and the forthcoming Cultural Planning to Maximize Learning: Creating Quality Learning Experiences.

BARNGA Ford County Room
Dr. Linda Thompson, Harding University, Searcy, Arkansas

This session focuses on multicultural communication barriers using the simulation, "BARNGA." Participants will play a card game which simulates communications barriers. This session is designed to promote "cultural literacy."

11:30 a.m. Lunch

A variety of Dodge City restaurants will welcome attendees. Participants will meet their lunch hosts to travel to assigned restaurants (see your registration packet for your dining assignment).

1:00 p.m. International Student Stage Ford County Room
Jen Roose, Dodge City Community College

DCCC International Students will share their experiences including the process they had to go through to get to Dodge City, Kansas, current events in their home country, and traditions or celebrations unique to their families or countries.

Purpose:

Beyond Tolerance to Respect is designed to benefit educators and business professionals who wish to better understand the changing composition of workers and students in the United States. Dodge City, as a microcosm of a multi-cultural society, is experiencing an ever expanding growth of multiple cultures. In a diverse society, the importance of developing an appreciation for our differences and celebrating our unique contributions is critical.
